ABOUT LANNYXSTUDIO

Hello, I'm Allana
The designer and maker behind
Made by LannyxStudio.

After completing a BA in Fashion at Northumbria University I spent several years working as a designer for a global manufacturing company who supplied clothing to large UK and European high street retailers. This role allowed me to immerse myself in the industry, undertaking countless design and sourcing trips to manufacturing hubs worldwide, including China, Hong Kong, and Bangladesh. However, my time in the industry sparked a personal quest for knowledge about the sustainability of fashion and manufacturing and thus, Made By LannyxStudio was born.

I created in house label, LannyxStudio utilising upcycling and made to order Fashion & Homewares to develop my first sustainable business model, promoting less waste, no overproduction and supporting our local textile economy.

Through my own label I connected with many small and independent brands and began to notice the similar issues they faced when trying to develop product in a better way and knew I needed to help. My passion for sustainable production, easier and fairer routes to market spurred me on to develop LannyxStudio into a micro manufacturing studio in the glorious North East to share my skills and knowledge with the brands that wanted to do and be better.

I currently undertake all the development, sampling and production runs and work with freelance makers and seamstresses when production assistance is required which is a growing part of the business. I also believe it's important to be training the next generation of UK makers and often have a work placement student who assists me day to day as part of their course curriculum.

Working with LannyxStudio means you can work directly with me and tap into years of product development experience. By embracing sustainable practices and ethical production methods, I strive to make a positive impact on the industry while delivering fashion forward product.
